ANNUAL REPORT 2011

Message from EWC President Charles E. Morrison and Chairman Puongpun Sananikone

In 2011, the East-West Center focused largely on the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, not only because APEC Leaders' Week was hosted in Honolulu, but because the organization's working agenda so closely matches our own. In fact, the first ideas for an entity resembling APEC were launched at the Center in 1966, and EWC has long given special attention to structures for international cooperation.

Among its activities, the Center provided offices for the APEC Hawai'i Host Committee, conducted educational programs to help inform Americans about their stake in the region; launched APEC-related studies in areas such as energy security and free trade; hosted a preliminary meeting of senior APEC officials; sponsored a successful business symposium during the Leaders' Week events; helped bring Pacific island leaders to the gathering for the first time ever; and developed an international consortium of K-12 schools in APEC economies.

In 2012, as the United States focuses greater attention toward Asia and the Pacific, the Center will continue to work toward greater international cooperation in the region. We will work on a major new English-teaching partnership in ASEAN countries; continue our human rights and justice projects; hold an international media conference in Seoul and an alumni conference in Beijing; lead election-monitoring teams to Papua New Guinea and Timor L'este; bring young Indian and Pakistani scientists together to work on environmental issues, and a great deal more. Despite current resource constraints, the Center remains a vibrant international hub of intellectual and professional exchange, dedicated to the vigorous pursuit of a peaceful, prosperous Asia Pacific region.

The EWC's Asian Studies Development Program (ASDP) launched the DOE-funded Undergraduate International Studies and Foreign Language demonstration project on Chinese language and culture, in partnership with colleges and universities in Texas, Kansas, Georgia, North Carolina, Massachusetts, and Oregon. Since 1991, ASDP has conducted faculty development workshops at the undergraduate level in American colleges and universities. Overall, more than 1,500 professors in the United States have participated in ASDP faculty development activities.

For the fourth year, the Asian International Justice Initiative (AIJI), a collaborative project between EWC and the U.C. Berkeley War Crimes Studies Center, conducted a Summer Institute on Human Rights and International Law, this year focusing on the rights of women and children in the Asia Pacific. AIJI also completed a two-year State Department supported training program for judges, police, and prosecutors in Papua, and continues to monitor and report on the proceedings of the UN Khmer Rouge Tribunal in Phnom Penh.

AIJI's trainings and research projects fall within the Politics, Governance, and Security area of the Center's Research Program. Other areas of research conducted by EWC specialists include Economics; Population and Health; and Environmental Change, Vulnerability, and Governance.

587 student fellows from 63 countries participated in EWC undergraduate and graduate training and scholarship programs in FY 2011 (a 5% increase from FY 2010).

Pakistan journalists join an interfaith Palm Sunday service in Missouri as part of the inaugural Pakistan-United States Journalists Exchange. The East-West Center has been conducting fellowships and exchanges for working American and Asia Pacific journalists since 1967. Intensive dialogue combined with field study promotes understanding of the complexities of the Asia Pacific region. During 2011, the East-West Center coordinated nine study tours and workshops for media professionals, in addition to seminars for government, business, and NGO leaders. Significant Meetings/Conferences

Heads of State and special envoys from 11 Pacific island nations met with President Barack Obama, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and other top U.S. and international officials in a series of meetings organized by the EWC Pacific Islands Development Program (PIDP) when APEC leaders met in Honolulu.

📌 EastWestCenter.org/PIDP

PIDP also organized the “State of the Pacific Dialogue” in January 2011, which was the first U.S.-based regional track 1.5 meeting for the Pacific that brought together senior representatives from government, academia, and civil society.

“No institution plays a role like the East-West Center... The U.S. government, and particularly the State Department, treasures the Center’s role on critical issues in Asia.”

Kurt Campbell, U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, during his Keynote address at the PECC 20th General Meeting in Washington, D.C., hosted by the East-West Center on September 28-29, 2011.

Research in the Field

Burmese villagers engage in community forestry training as part of a U.S. State Department funded project headed by EWC Senior Fellow Jefferson Fox, which addresses the challenges of deforestation caused by demographic changes and shifting cultivation.

EWC Senior Fellow Melissa Finucane filming “Climate Matters,” a NOAA-funded documentary featuring stories of climate impacts on Pacific islands designed to help policy makers understand real-world climate impacts and the need for usable climate information. 📌 PacificRISA.org

Launch of Websites and Publications

As part of the Asia Matters for America project, the East-West Center launched two new initiatives: Korea Matters for America (KoreaMattersforAmerica.org) and Australia Matters for America (AustraliaMattersforAmerica.org). Both initiatives comprise a publication and website that provide a one-stop, ongoing source of information, data, news, and analysis on the country’s relations with the United States. ■

Public Engagement

The East-West Center connects its resources and research with the local, national, and international community through news media and public information services; briefings for visiting officials; and public programs. In 2011, the EWC conducted more than 25 public programs for Hawai'i audiences.

The East-West Center has enriched the Hawai'i community for three decades through exhibitions, performances, lecture-demonstrations, and hands-on workshops focusing on traditional Asia Pacific arts. In 2011, more than 20,000 students and community members statewide experienced the Center's arts programs, including many youth from economically disadvantaged neighborhoods.

East-West Center

For more than 50 years, the East-West Center has been promoting better relations and understanding among the people and nations of the United States, Asia, and the Pacific through cooperative study, research, and dialogue. Established by the U.S. Congress in 1960, the Center serves as a resource for information and analysis on critical issues of common concern, bringing people together to exchange views, build expertise, and develop policy options.

Officially known as the Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange between East and West, the Center is a U.S.-based independent, public, nonprofit institution for public diplomacy with international governance, staffing, students, and participants.

The Center's 21-acre Honolulu campus, adjacent to the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa, is located midway between Asia and the U.S. mainland and features research, residential, and international conference facilities. The Center's Washington, D.C. office focuses on preparing the United States for an era of growing Asia Pacific prominence.
